Written and Illustrated by Aliyah

Once upon a time there was a baby dragon, a cheetah cub, and a wolf pup. Each one had no parents. This is how they met. The wolf pup came to a river to get a drink. The baby dragon came to the same river. The cheetah cub came too. The three of them became friends and worked together to find food and protect themselves from predators.

One snowy night they came to a cave. The baby dragon learned how to breathe fire and made a fire to keep them warm. The three friends lived and grew up in that cave.

The three are teenagers now and catch a moose to eat. But then a pack of wolves want to take the moose from them! The dragon breathed his fire, the wolf growled, and the cheetah showed her teeth and hissed. The pack of wolves didn't think it was worth the risk to try to take the moose.

The dragon, cheetah and wolf ate the moose and then went back to their cave. The cave had collapsed!

The dragon stays awake all day and night. He only sleeps once a year. At night the cheetah and the wolf sleep on his back while he flies over the land and breathes fire to look for another cave.

They finally find another cave and it is twice as big as the first one. The dragon builds another fire. They hear a little voice calling, "Help!"

The three friends rescue a tiger cub from drowning.

The tiger cub says, "Thank you so much!"

The friends say, "No problem."

They take her back to the cave and live happily ever after!
